

Prairie from page 13 the house and accented the kitchen, living room, dining room and other parts of the house in Prairie style lamps, furniture and other accessories, which is an exponent of the Craftsman style.

On the second floor, a spacious outdoor summer sleeping porch was standard equipment before air conditioning. The Mannings took that out and fashioned a totally contemporary modern bathroom. The children inherited the original bathroom which was decorated to appeal to their childlike sensibilities and tastes.

The basement is the most utilitarian part of the house, having a den, an office, a laundry room and a complete weight and exercise room within its four walls.

In conclusion, the home is a well thought out, thoroughly livable and tastefully restored home – one that will give the Manning family many, many years of comfortable living.
