St. Paul's church receives Communion table

By Burt Saidel

The St. Paul's Church Communion table is the latest in the work of "The God Squad," a.k.a. Harold Prigozen, Richard Cummings and myself, Burt Saidel. Since 1993, the 'squad' has completed and donated over 85 public pieces. Public pieces are those made for institutions such as churches, synagogues, schools, mosques and symphony orchestras.

In Oakwood, the largest collection of our works, actually the largest collection in the world, is at the Chabad Center on Far Hills. There we have more than twenty works which complete their sanctuary. I know that quite a few visitors have visited the center and seen them. All are welcome.

What is the basis of the God Squad's frenetic activity? We all have the same purpose. Using our skills and following the inspiration provided by exercising our art, we have had nothing but joy and satisfaction. We are also joined by others from time to time.

Thus far, we have not turned down any requests but have a waiting list which could stretch several years. Since Harold is presently 91-years-old and Dick and I are each 78, this is a sort of guaranteed longevity, perhaps immortality.

We have donated our works to nearly every religion. We have the deepest gratitude and appreciation for the requests made of us. We remain youthful in the challenge and full of joy for
