School Board to pass 5.75 mill levy for November ballot

The Oakwood Schools Board of Education, at a special meeting on June 29, 2010, is expected to pass a Resolution of Necessity to place a 5.75 mill property tax operating levy on the Nov. 2 ballot. This would be the first request for an increase since voters passed a levy in November

The Board of Education cited two major reasons for the funding request: 1) maintenance of one of the best Pre-K12 academic programs in the region, state, and nation, and 2) financial security that protects essential operations of the district.

School Board members expressed optimism that Oakwood residents will continue to support the schools. "We realize these are difficult economic times and take seriously our responsibility to cut costs in order to make this request as low as possible. We appreciate the advice given at our five Levy Focus Group meetings and will continue to work with the community to maintain the excellence in education that the Oakwood community has enjoyed and perpetuated in the past," Board President Elizabeth Reger said.

"Passage of this levy will allow us to maintain the quality of our programs and opportunities for students. This levy will also fund the state mandate of all-day kindergarten to begin in August 2012. We do not take our community's investment in our schools for granted. I am proud of our staff for taking steps to help control costs and grateful to our community for your support over the years," said Superintendent of Schools Dr. Mary Jo Scalzo,

"We have always made it a priority to maintain accountability to the citizens of Oakwood through sound fiscal management and full financial disclosure. We have followed through to keep all promises made in prior levy campaigns. In addition, the school district has made over $1 million worth of reductions over three years and negotiated a zero percent increase on base salaries for all employees in August 2011, Treasurer Kevin S. Philo said.

The Oakwood Schools' Business Advisory Council, a group of over twenty independent Oakwood Business professionals who meet monthly to monitor the district's finances and business operations, has reviewed the financial projections and will continue their involvement when meetings resume in September.

The Oakwood Schools anticipate naming a levy committee in the near future and will be providing much more information between now and Nov. 2 so that the voters can make an informed decision at the ballot box.

In 2007, the district pledged to Continue the Excellence. Since then, the district has maintained its "Excellent with Distinction" state rating and been named in the top two percent of the nation's public schools. Students' academic successes in advanced placement, college acceptance, and college graduation have continued. Currently, the district is transforming its Industrial Arts program into Pre-engineering without additional operating cost to

The next step in placing the levy request on the November ballot is Board action on a resolution to proceed with the election. This will occur at the July 12 Board of Education meeting.

Joyce Kasprzak honored with service award

Oakwood resident Joyce Reid Kasprzak was honored with the Cardinal Bernardin Community Service Award. In recognition of her decades of service to faith communities and Miami Valley area children, Ms. Kasprzak accepted the award Sunday, June 13, at the annual Service Award Banquet, held this year at St. Benedict the Moor Church.

The purpose of the annual banquet is to honor those people who have dedicated their lives to community service but have received little recognition. The Cardinal Joseph Louis Bernardin award recognizes those persons whose efforts have touched so many lives in our communities. This year 14 honorees were named.

Everyone nominated exemplified the epitome of sacrifice and commitment. In her current role as Executive Director of Children's Historical Publishing, the nonprofit organization has distributed over 350.000 learning activity books to area schools. All books are created with local themes, using local artists, researchers, curriculum directors and teachers. Funded by generous grants from civic and business organizations, the Oakwood based organization is currently working on projects for Habitat for Humanity and for the Wright Dunbar Walk of Fame.

Also contributing to her selection for the award is Joyce's involvement with Holy Angels social

During her tenure the club has sustained a membership base of 300 plus and she's most happy to see a good number of younger members join the club.

Incoming Dayton Rotary President Paul Miller is the Vice President of office leasing and sales with CB Richard Ellis Brokerage Services. Having been a member of the club for ten years, Paul has served in many capacities and brings a wealth of experience to this office. He is looking forward to an exciting year ~ interesting weekly programs; continued service to Dayton Public School teachers and students; further engagement with the club's Kenya Project and AIDS orphans there; the disbursement of grant dollars to important local community projects; and as usual, the promotion of opportunities for fellowship among the club's members!

Concerns over Old River Athletic Fields

The Old River Athletic Fields is the primary site being considered for a new Oakwood recreational facility. As these plans are being finalized, many residents question whether enough has been done to address the contamination issues on the former NCR property. The city maintains there is no cause for concern, but the data suggests otherwise. In fact, NCR officials themselves considered contamination to be a serious issue and in 2002 they put the total cost of cleanup to be between $20.2 million and $48.2 million.

The question we must ask is: Can we trust a city government, who is determined to move the development forward under tight budgetary constraints, to give the proper priority to contamination issues? Unfortunately, history is filled with examples of overzealous local governments that have downplayed environmental issues with tragic consequences. Oakwood officials have stated that they have no plans to remediate this site despite the following facts:

Arsenic, lead, PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyls), TCE (tetrachloroethane), and other contaminants have been detected in the soil and/or groundwater of the Old River fields. Dumping sites to the north, south, and east have been covered over and left in place. One site alone is estimated to contain 160,000 tons of foundry waste.

including lead, arsenic, PCBs, benzo(a)pyrene, TCE, and over 25 other volatile organic compounds.

PCB and cyclohexane spills, associated with a carbonless paper manufacturing complex, were discovered in an area north of the Old River fields.

A vast, 6-acre open storage and disposal area existed along the eastern and southern borders of the Old River fields. Historic aerial photos indicate hundreds of chemical drums and numerous other items were stored here in the early 1970's. Some of the drums reportedly contained flammable liquids and industrial waste. The drums were gone by the 1980's and their final disposition has not been disclosed.

a branch of the former Miami & Erie canal which borders the Old River fields to the east and south. The canal channel was likely filled in with porous foundry waste and other material in the 1920's.

Soil and groundwater in the vicinity of the storage area along the eastern border of the fields has been found to be contaminated with high levels of TCE, CIS 1,2 DCE, vinyl chloride, and numerous other toxic compounds. Evidence indicates that, at a minimum, substantial leaking occurred in this area.

The low-lying Old River fields are 10 to 15 feet lower in elevation than the surrounding dumpsites; thus, contaminated surface and ground water tends to flow toward the Old River fields.

The NCR factory operated during a time when there was little control of industrial waste disposal. Prior to the 1970s most industrial waste was typically dumped in pits, stored on site, burned, or discharged to surface waters. NCR operated a sister factory in Millsboro, Delaware from 1967 to 1980 and, like the Dayton plant, they built cash registers and electronic equipment. At the Millsboro plant it was discovered that liquid wastes had been dumped in pits on company property and the groundwater was found to be contaminated with TCE. As a result the site has been placed on the EPA's National Priorities List of the most polluted sites in the country.

When NCR left Dayton last year they left a 100-year legacy of contamination with which we must now deal. Beneath the pleasant grassy fields lies a potpourri of industrial contaminants contained within the soil and groundwater. Of these, TCE is the most pervasive and one of the most toxic. It is a known carcinogen, neurotoxin, allergen, and it can interfere with the development of a fetus or child. Exposure pathways include direct contact (grass, soil, or surface water); inhaling vapors emanating from the subsurface soil and groundwater; and vapor intrusion into buildings. TCE has long been considered one of the most toxic substances on the EPA's toxic substances priority list, but a recent EPA assessment indicates TCE is up to 60 times more toxic than previously believed. As a result of this study, a bill entitled

"The TCE reduction act of 2007" is working its way through Congress. The bill would address deficiencies in current law and require more stringent cleanup of TCE.

City officials have known about the pollution for years but have decided NOT to engage in an open and honest dialogue. Therefore, we must learn the facts for ourselves. I have spent months studying the piles of documents available in the Ohio EPA archives on this subject and have presented the important points here as clearly and accurately as I know how. But don't take my word for it. For those interested in doing their own research a good place to start would be the Dayton Daily News archives at http://www. daytondailynews.com/services/ archive/. Type "ground under NCR complex polluted" in the search terms box to find two excellent articles on this topic. In addition, I am preparing summaries of some of the pertinent public documents in the Ohio EPA archives. If you would like to be put on the mailing list contact me at ppruitt@woh.

The evidence for contamination throughout the former NCR properties is overwhelming, and we do not know what additional contamination a comprehensive, independent investigation would reveal. Every study to date has been funded by parties with a vested interest in the outcome, and in many areas the investigations were never completed or were very superficial in nature. Internal NCR memos published by the Dayton Daily News in 2003 indicate that NCR officials did not conduct additional tests "because of the time and expense involved and the fact that the results could impose a legal obligation to undertake remediation work." Therefore, it is vitally important that an independent investigation be conducted to fully characterize the environmental hazards both in and around the Old River fields site. And we must make it clear to city officials that the people of Oakwood will not tolerate a "Play at Your Own Risk" recreational facil-

'Round Town

It was a bright, hot, sunny morning last Wednesday at 10 a.m. (and blazing hot by afternoon) when Burt Saidel, the Oakwood Register's arts reviewer/ arts savant, donned his bicycle gear, loaded his besuited body onto his bicycle and pedaled off on a 55-mile, five-hour ride that would take him from his home in Dayton to Cincinnati's Music Hall to see...an opera!

Burt performs this ritual once each summer during the Cincinnati Opera summer opera season. His wife, Alice, follows him down via car. They arrive at Music Hall. Burt rushes back to a dressing room, showers, spiffs up, dresses and hurriedly takes his seat in the audience, ready for the first upbeat of the conductor's baton.

This year, the challenge of the ride demanded even greater stamina than in years past; after the arduous ride in the hot sun he would see a performance of Richard Wagner's Die Meistersinger, one of opera's longest works, which would begin at 6 p.m. and not finish until after midnight, a six-hour operatic tour de force.

After reading Burt's review in his regular space in today's paper, you will have to agree that he did not miss a note or word of the performance in spite of his five hour marathon ride to the opera.

Congratulations, Burt. Your achievement is as much of a masterpiece of endurance, challenge and love for opera as the Wagnerian masterpiece itself.

Buffer Cafe opens as indie breakfasf/lunch Bistro

By Tanya Noffsinger

Pass the Plugra* please! There is little that is not better with butter (Julia & Paula certainly would agree) and it is upon this premise that Oakwood resident, thirty-three year old Amy Beaver and her business partner, Sarah Dudley, have opened their breakfast/lunch concept eatery across from Burger King at 1106 Brown Street.

To set the stage, enter under the butter yellow and white striped awning, reminiscent of Rodeo Drive's Giorgio's of Beverly Hills, and into the intimate space with the walls painted with what else, a warm early morning sunglow. There's even a sparkling, twinkling chandelier at the entrance.

Amy, from a restaurant family, grew up in Hilton Head and enjoyed fresh produce from the family garden and her parents setting an example of using locally sourced foods. Even though the co-owners share restaurant duties, Amy is primarily front of the house, Sarah the business portion and Chef Patrick, who graduated from the Oregon Culinary Institute about six months ago, for a majority of the recipe development and the food production in the postage stamp sized kitchen. But, a true chef can work wonders in a miniscule space when structured and organized with mise en place. The twenty-eight year old chef, formerly in the Coast Guard and several other kitchens, returned to Dayton to care for an ailing family member, answered an ad posted by Amy and Sarah and well, the rest is history. He is producing maximum results in his minimalist workspace.

The guiding mantra for the Butter Cafe's owners is fresh organic foods, eggs, produce and meat, sourced largely locally, with all ingredients that "you can pronounce"--so no preservatives or chemical additives. All meat and eggs come from Cincinnati's Findlay Market where Amy drives on Monday, her so-called day off. The Butter Cafe also caters to customers who are gluten intolerant. There are dedicated toasters and waffle irons for those special customers.

Just two weeks after opening the Butter Cafe, the vivacious, ebullient Amy and Sarah, beautiful with her hair the color of the highest quality butter, indicate that plans are underway to knock out a wall to extend the kitchen and seating area and to add al fresco dining along the side of the restaurant and to have deliveries and catering available, especially servicing those employed by Miami Valley Hospital.

fast (all day--except French Toast Kabobs and Oatmeal) and lunch everyday, except Monday, from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. The breakfast menu features five kinds of pancakes, three types of French Toast, two waffles, four omelettes plus a build your own and a Skinny B---h Frittata and oatmeal to which you can add chocolate, peanut butter or butterscotch chips, chopped pecans, bananas or strawberries. Notably absent are any Benedict preparations but the Organic Valley three egg omelettes are prepared in the French tradition, much thinner than the American counterpart, and with flavor of freshness of organic ingredients that you just won't believe. The Italian omelette and Skinny B frittata were equally tasty. Those are served with toast, but I would also add the a la carte Breakfast potatoes with parsley and onion in the morning and rosemary and sea salt in the afternoon. I would love to have a pepper grinder offered however. Two ladies sitting near me were raving about the Chai Tea French Toast which I also sampled. Delicious as it stands, as recipes are being tweaked, I would suggest kicking it up a notch by using Brioche or Challah. But undoubtedly, my favorite selection was the Jelly Donut Pancakes. I would ask for the really sweet, buttery glaze on the side but this selection is "off the hook," "huge," "money"--just order it! Hmm! Do you suppose they'd make a peanut butter and jelly pancake? Bet these three go-getters would. Enjoy specialty sandwiches, soups (Amy's dad's chili that has got some authority) salads, and desserts at lunchtime. And even though no iced tea is available, be sure to try the absolutely refreshing, with just the right amount of citric kick, strawberry lemonade.

This charming little gem of a breakfast/lunch bistro is already enjoying a brisk business and they are slammed at lunch and on the weekends. Amy's little dog's name, Martha Stewart, sums up the goals that these three passionate foodies will achieve--a fun, quirky, indie place that is out of the box and quite tasty.

Amy has sent along the recipe for their very popular Chai Tea French Toast.

Music makes for better math skills

Jim Uphoff Ed. D.

Many refer to the skills of Algebra as "gatekeeper" skills since they contend that it provides a solid foundation for later learning by teaching abstract reasoning skills. Whether these skills are in a separate distinct course or a key part of a mathematical concepts course the algebraic knowledge is essential. Yet far too many of our nation's youth find this learning to be a real challenge. What might help them to do better in such algebra learning?

This answer may surprise you but the research is very clear. Strange school bedfellows can work together. Have more children, when in the middle grades, learn to play a musical instrument and/or participate in choral singing and learning. The musical instrument learning helps the most, but the singing also contributes to this later algebra learning.

Researcher Barbara Helmrich of Baltimore's College of Notre Dame studied 6,026 ninth-graders enrolled in six different Maryland school districts. All had completed an introductory algebra course in either eighth or ninth grade and had taken the HSA, a test that assesses how well they learned the algebra.

Middle grades (6-8) students were divided into three groups: 1. Those who had received formal instruction on a musical instrument in grades 6-8. 2. Those in the same grades who received choral instruction during these same grades. 3. Those who received NO formal musical training during these years.

Those who had studied music SIGNIFICANTLY outperformed their peers! "Formal instrumental instruction impacted algebra scores the most," she reported but, "Choral instruction also positively impacted scores but to a lesser extent." The achievement gaps were especially pronounced among black students.

Helmrich contends that the significant brain development that takes place among our children in these grades is enhanced by the proliferation of new synapses in their brains that music instruction produces. This, in turn, enhances their ability to use such abstract thinking as is at the heart of alge-

The message of this study is simple. Be sure that your children are actively involved in musical learning during their middle years. I would add grade five to this range and even encourage the vocal music all the way through school. Such research results help to explain why our Oakwood schools have always placed a clear emphasis upon our music education program.

Pet of the Week

They call me Eightball and I am told that I am oh-so-handsome with my long, silky hair. I am 10 years YOUNG :) Ten years is actually just a drop in the ocean, as an indoor cat in a good home can live 20 years! I just wish more people realized that and didn't pass me up for the kittens. I love being brushed and curling up on laps. I do great with other cats and love children of all ages! One of my favorite past-times (besides napping) is gazing out windows. I am just a loving, easy-going fluffball! I am neutered and microchipped already as well. I really hope that someone will give me a new wonderful home for 10 more years!!

Shelter Note: We are in need of more fosters (great for empty nesters/retired) to occasionally foster adult cats that need more socializing before going up for adoption! It really increases their chances of finding good homes and can be quite enjoyable for the fosters to have temporary feline friends. Contact us at 268-PETS if interested.

Die Meistersinger a Wagnerian masterpiece

Burt Saidel

When is an opera more than an opera? There are times when this great art form reaches beyond the music, the drama, the magnificent singing. An opera can be a total creative outpouring that unites dreams and craft into something truly unforgettable, something with a life of its own.

Cincinnati Opera, its talented and committed staff headed by Artistic Director Evans Mirageas, its company run by General Director Patty Beggs, has extended its resources to bring Wagner's Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg to its devoted audience.

So many aspects make this production special. It is an expensive undertaking. The large cast and chorus must all have that special vocal fac - Wagnerian. The artists of the Cincinnati Symphony must be augmented to virtually fill the pit to the brim.

Add recreating medieval Germany on the Music Hall stage and dressing the minions that fill that stage in authentic costumes, the task is so daunting that it is rarely attempted. To take daunting to the extreme, Meistersinger opened a scant four days after Cincinnati Opera celebrated its 90th anniversary with a Gala Concert still vibrating in my memory.

What makes Wagner operas so special? He wrote his own libretti. His philosophy, far loftier than his own mendacious persona, poured onto the page. He gave his name to an age. His music takes possession of you completely. I have experienced seeing those most skeptical become converted in one opera, often in the opening act. They "get it."

Meistersinger is not a fable; there are no gods or demons. It is a real story about real people. It is a comedy, Wagner's only one. I could over-simplify the description by saying that Meistersinger is like "South Pacific," only with better tunes!

The story, a love story, is also a telling exposition of the philosophy of art. In medieval Nürnberg, as in all ages, great artists lived and expressed their artistry. Often, too often, crystallization occurs in which the art loses its freedom and must live in a cage of its own rules.

The emerging medieval middle class, elevated after the scourges of the Black Death decimated Europe, developed a society where work, family, religion and art were valued.

Each city-state was proud of its accomplishments and defended its aegis zealously.

The Meistersingers were tradesmen of all classes - cobblers, clerks, furriers, goldsmiths, bakers, buckle makers, all glorifying the art of song. To become a Meistersinger was to have attained the summum bonum of society. It is in that milieu the opera is set.

In scenes of great charm and humor, we meet the Meistersingers and their volatile and enthusiastic apprentices. We encounter one of the great characters of literature, Hans Sachs. A cobbler, philosopher and true artist, Sachs is respectful of the rules but able to find the value and glory of artistic growth

To become a Meistersinger, one must pass a rigorous trial. A young and somewhat impoverished knight, Walther, has espied a lovely young woman, Eva. He learns that she is the daughter of a Meistersinger and can only marry one. He also learns that her coveted hand in marriage is to be the prize for the winner of the annual Song Contest held by the Meistersingers.

What is he to do? Of course, his confidence leads him to enter the initial trial even without the years of training considered essential. Walther sings with great passion but, sadly, far from the rigid rules. He is rejected abruptly. To complicate matters, a doddering old bachelor, Sixtus Beckmesser, has his eyes on Eva as well.

The rest of the opera, full of the greatest music and charming wit, solves the dilemma. Not only does Walther gain Eva but Sachs' charming apprentice, David, consummates his love for Magdalene, nurse to Eva.

Before all's well that ends well, we were treated to operatic ecstasy! The music, propelled seamlessly by the orchestra under the baton of young John Keenan, let every great voice ring to the rafters. As Hans Sachs, American bass-baritone James Johnson made an indelible mark with his Cincinnati debut.

There were scenes of absolute perfection as Johnson's vocal line vibrated deep into our consciousness. His noble presence elevated and inspired the entire cast. Hans-Joachim Ketelsen as Beckmesser and Norbert Ernst as David added spice and excitement with their electric performances. The ladies, Twyla Robinson's Eva and Maria Zifchak's Magdalene sang with sparkle. John Horton Murray as Walther proved to be a worthy victor of lovely Eva's hand.

Unique touches made this Meistersinger unforgettable. The final act procession of the guilds is often cumbersome – Aida without animals! Cincinnati made it fun instead of tedious. A trio of mimes appeared representing symbols of the guilds. In short order, the already crowded stage was vibrating with charming children and very young ballerinas.

Beckmesser's clumsy song was hardly a path to Eva's heart. Sachs explained that the song was not Beckmesser's nor his but by someone else. Walther strode to the dais to sing his song, the famous Preislied, Prize Song. He won crowd, audience and, of course, the beautiful Eva. He accepted Eva but stubbornly refused to become a Meister.

Sachs admonished the victorious Walther to value the Meister's tradition as well as his own passion. When Walther bowed to accept the gold image of King David making him a Meister, the audience exploded into applause, which continued unbroken, until the curtain fell.

Thank you Cincinnati Opera, so many "got it." They received the gift of Wagner's genius. It is a gift that keeps on giving.
